

Born and raised in St. Landry Parish (Opelousas), David Pitre completed undergraduate education at then-USL, where he studied English, History, and Philosophy, earning the B.A. His graduate study began at Virginia Tech University, where he earned the M.A. in English (British Literature). He earned his Ph.D. at the University of South Carolina in English (concentration in Scottish Studies and British Literature).

Following graduate and post-graduate studies, Dr. Pitre served on the English Department faculty at LSU-Baton Rouge, before moving into independent-school education. He served various faculty roles, including Master Teacher and Department Chair. His administrative positions included Dean of Academics, Dean of Faculty, Headmaster, and Head of School. Among his publications are essays and book reviews in academic journals and articles in encyclopedias. Since 2014, Dr. Pitre has served as an educational- and search-consultant, including serving as professional-interim Head of School in several college-preparatory schools.
